Dear Ms. Morse -

I am pleased to respond to your request to express my feelings & reaction to your services of finding lost heirs and money they may be eligible for.

Admittedly, I was very skeptical when I first received a phone call from your office that you had information relative to the fact that I may be the recipient of some inheritance of a distant relative in Europe. In fact, I recall that I was not too receptive or polite to the gentlemen on the phone that day. My first reaction was that I know of no relatives, much less any with any amount of wealth, since my connection would be through an aged grandmother who was now deceased over 40 years & who immigrated to this country as a young woman, so any descendants thereof would likewise be "ancient" & there was never any information or indication that any assets were available from that source.

My next concern was that I may be obligated to you in return for any expenses incurred in your gathering of needed documents & information in order to proceed. I felt it may end up costing me & couldn't believe it would be worthwhile.

But at the time I was visiting with my daughter and son-in-law, who thought "what have I got to lose", so I pursued it & after almost 3 yrs. later, I did receive my "inheritance" check and was not only surprised but impressed with the professionalism you conveyed in gathering the information necessary & the contacts with me.
